

Dunkle Tage – Dark Days

Projektleiterin

Prof. Dr. Gabriele Peters

Zeitraum

2007

Kontakt

Prof. Dr.

Gabriele Peters

Fachbereich Informatik

Fachhochschule

Dortmund

Emil-Figge-Straße 42

44227 Dortmund

Tel.: (0231) 755-6796

E-Mail: gabriele.peters

@fh-dortmund.de

1 Topic of the Artwork

These photographs are a small excerpt of about 70 works which emerged from journeys to several cities, among them New York, Prague, and Venice. The whole cycle is called Dark Days – Venice, Prague, New York. Its topic is the isolation of the modern human being in today's big cities. The reality of the city inhabitants undergoes an estrangement by stylistic devices such as coarse grain, blur, camera shake, and multiple exposures.

The selected images show scenes of streets in Prague and New York. They have been taken from a large distance at night. The humans shown in the photographs are not visible in the negatives with the naked eye. Only an extreme enlargement makes them visible.

2 Technique

The technical process to generate these images is a hybrid one. The photographs have been taken on panchromatic film. The relevant sections of the negatives have been scanned with high resolution (4000 ppi). After applying the usual image enhancement techniques, artificial grain is added to the images to further exaggerate the effect of the film grain. Only after this the images are scaled up to their final size. It is important that the grain is added before the enlargement, because otherwise the pointillist effect, especially interesting from different viewing distances, is missed. Finally, a triplex filter with yellowish and purple tones is applied to the black and white image for atmospheric reasons.

3 Artistic Background

Digital art first of all has to be art. A work of art, either digital or not, has to express an artistic statement. Shining examples for artistic statements and a source of inspiration for Dark Days have been the Swiss sculptor Alberto Giacometti and the Russian filmmaker Andrej Tarkowskij. Giacometti has reduced the human body to its basic shapes and thus appeals perfectly to the human visual (and thus aesthetic) system [iV 2008]. Tarkowskij takes the view that a work of art should suggest something inexpressible. It can evoke a memory of a personal emotional incident and has the intention to arouse an own spiritual state in the observer. By giving an account of a hopeless world an artist can arouse the feeling of the opposite ideal. Dark Days tries its hand at this.

References

- Gabriele Peters, Dark Days – New York, 35th International Conference and Exhibition on Computer Graphics and Interactive Techniques, (SIGGRAPH 2008), 2008.
- Gabriele Peters, Dark Days – Prague, 5th International Conference on Computer Graphics, Imaging and Visualization (CGIV 2008), Symposium and Gallery of Digital Art (D-ART), 2008.
- Gabriele Peters, Dark Days – Prague, 12th International Conference on Information Visualisation (iV 2008), 2008.
- Gabriele Peters, Dark Days – New York, 4th International Conference Computer Graphics, Imaging and Visualization (CGIV 2007), Symposium and Gallery of Digital Art (D-ART), 2007.
- Gabriele Peters, Dark Days – New York, 11th International Conference on Information Visualization (iV 2007), 2007.

